"Running the Books", by Avi Steinberg is subtitled, "The Adventures of an Accidental Prison Librarian". On the surface, it's an interesting look at how the author spent two years as a librarian in one of Boston's prisons. Avi Steinberg was an obituary writer and had no previous training or experience as a librarian.

Running Wild was written in a way so as to capture the feelings that can overcome a person when he or she has an addiction to this kind of obsession. The obsession to run where no one else runs, to run when no one else runs (ie.. blistering heat , biting cold) and to run farther than anyone else runs. The author does convey to the reader the reasons why he runs , the mental euphoria , the need to overcome physical pain, and of course loss of a loved one. What does seem to get lost in the translation ...

Few books capture the feeling of being completely lost and alone in your life, only to find yourself while on a grand adventure, like Cheryl Strayed's Wild. The book, which inspired the Reese Witherspoon movie of the same name, recounts Strayed's trek along the Pacific Crest Trail, a 2,650-mile long hiking route that runs from Canada to Mexico, crossing through Washington, Oregon, and ...

Huck describes how he feels after blowing the whistle on a swindle being run by the king and the duke and heading out on the raft with Jim, hoping to escape the two con artists. But the river no longer symbolizes an easy escape route. Instead, the duke and king row a small boat out and catch up to the raft.

world, Steinberg remains stuck at a crossroads, his “romantic” existence as a freelance obituary writer no longer cutting it.

Seeking direction (and dental insurance) Steinberg takes a job running the library counter at a Boston prison. He is quickly drawn into the community of outcasts that forms among his bookshelves—an assortment of quirky regulars, including con men, pimps, minor prophets, even ghosts—all searching for the perfect book and a connection to the outside world. Steinberg recounts their daily dramas with heartbreak and humor in this one-of-a-kind memoir—a piercing exploration of prison culture and an entertaining tale of one young man's earnest attempt to find his

Dean Foster comes a thrilling Pip and Flinx adventure, wherein a certain red-haired, green-eyed young man blessed (or cursed) with strange powers finds himself and his mini-dragon sidekick on a top-secret mission concerning deep space, alien worlds . . . and a primordial horror intent on devouring all of it. In the outer depths of the universe lies the Great Emptiness, where something dreadful lurks, hidden behind a great gravitational lens of dark matter. Something horrific that howls and writhes and rages across three hundred million light-years of space—and is now heading straight for the Commonwealth and moving faster all the time. One slim chance exists to avert catastrophe, and only Flinx can take it. Roaming the galaxy is a conscious planet-size weapons system, the legacy of a long-extinct race. As Flinx is the only one who has ever experienced mental contact with the machine, it is his job to find the powerful alien artifact and coax it into joining the battle against the behemoth from beyond. So Pip and Flinx valiantly sail into the unknown aboard their little spaceship, which is immediately forced down for emergency repairs on planet Arrawd, home to less advanced sentients and therefore off-limits to space travelers. But what with Arrawd being very beautiful, and Flinx being Flinx, this particular rule doesn't stand a chance. Now, spiritual courage and truth seeking far beyond the veil of our contemporary delusions."--Sting

Born in India to a prominent Hindu Brahmin family, the Venerable Tenzin Priyadarshi was only six years old when he began having visions of a mysterious mountain peak, and of men with shaved heads wearing robes the color of sunset. "It was as vivid as if I were watching a scene from life," he writes. And so at the age of ten, he ran away from boarding school to find this place--taking a train to the end of the line and then riding a bus to wherever it went. Strangely enough, he ended up at a Buddhist monastery that was the place in his dreams. His frantic parents and relatives set out to find him
